DECLINING AND GROWING INDUSTRIES FOR 2000

DECLINING AND GROWING OCCUPATIONS FOR 1998

Declining and growing industries and occupations are determined by the change in their share of total employment over a three-year span. The 10 percent whose share declined the most are termed “declining”, while the 10 percent whose share increased the most are considered “growing.” In addition, to make the “declining” list, employment must have actually declined over the three-year span, and, to make the “growing” list, employment must have actually increased over the period.

The industry report compares 2000 with 1997, while the occupational report uses 1998 data and compares it with 1995.
